Whether you ride out the next hurricane or evacuate to a safer location, invariably one of the first things property owners will do is inspect their homes and business locations that were in the path of the storm for damage. Prior to the storm, it is, of course, prudent to record “time-stamped” photos and videos of the interior and exterior of structures, as evidence of property condition prior to the storm; just as it is prudent to record ”time-stamped“ photos and videos of affected properties after the storm – particularly for potential insurance claims. All this said, apart from insurance-related claims....
